Down With Precedent! Al Meets Herb Today

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 29—Two men the mere mention of whose names three months ago would have started a stampede, met here today under circumstances which, whether they will it or not, have been made highly dramatic.

Al Smith called on Herbert Hoover.

...nce in a purely perfunctory manner and that for, before either thought that he would be in the position he occupies today.

The "happy warrior" motored over from Coral Gables to pay his respects to Mr. Hoover at Bible Isle. In so doing he not only appeased the curiosity of Miami Beach and stilled the speculative conversation that has been running rampant for two days, but he also eased a situation that has been embarrassing to both men. The first that history... ...for barely if ever has a defeated candidate for the presidency called on his successful rival... is merely an ideal. Al Smith takes short cuts through traditions although he is a stickler for the ordinary amenities of political and social intercourse.

Today's meeting was not arranged without considerable jockeying. The former governor accompanied by John J. Raskob, his campaign manager.

FISHERMAN RESCUED AT CROSS VILLAGE

Hands and Feet of Man Frozen from Exposure on Ice

ILLOSKEY, Mich., Jan. 29—Hands and feet nearly frozen off, Lewis Sweet, 51, Manson fisherman who was given up for lost when he drifted into Lake Michigan on an ice floe a week ago, was rescued at Cross village near here today.

Sweet landed on Skilagalee light last Wednesday 24 hours after the ice block on which he was fishing broke away from the main field.

He stayed in a cabin on the island that holds the light too weak and benumbed to motion to rescuers that passed over several times. Today he swallowed the seven mile from the island to Cross village.

Villagers saw him stumbling blindly along through the heavy snow drifts. It took him into the home of Henry Sullivan where he is being treated for exposure.

Sleigh Ride Thrilling

Marion Girl Tells Story of First Trip in "Cutter"

BY HATTIE HOUCK
Marion Star Staff Writer

"JINGLE bells, Jingle bells
Jingle all the way
Oh what fun it is to ride
In a one horse, open sleigh."

The Jingle bells the fun one horse and a sleigh affordel more than a 40 minute pleasure ride for a city bred girl who had never ridden in a sleigh, when Dr. C. Dickson, manager of Goores & Ross Inc. drove up to The Star office with a dapple-gray horse and a cutter yesterday afternoon.

The older folk who passed the turnout gazed after it with eyes which remembered days gone by when their too and fro to parties gone a visit, and had the interest of times in sleighs of the same type.

New to Youngsters

The sad part of it all was that small children looked at it with wondering eyes not knowing what it was. Poor dears never to have seen a sleigh drawn by an applegray horse like Doc. It isn't their fault that for there aren't many of the cutter style or any other style sleigh left these days.

People who own sleighs leave them in out in barns or in the open little realizing that when a cold crisp snowy day arrives the rare old time pleasure is theirs.

The sleigh which was used for the momentous ride came from the barn of an employe in the barns of the Moorts & Reed Co. and the horse was an offspring of Dr. Strong one of the great racers in the country.

Built for Speed

"Cutter sleighs got the name evidently from the lightness of their frames the narrowness of the runners and the speed with which they can skim over the snow.

The driver after going for some time almost drove into a gasoline station to fill the gas tank until he remembered that "Doc" could be refueled only at a feed bin.

Modernity would creep in to this old fashioned vehicle though. The occupants sat on an automobile blanket!

What gay times the folks must have had years ago when sleigh

PLAN EARLY START

Six Assistant Engineers To Be Added To Help Rush Plans

Marion launched a $200,000 street improvement program last night when city council adopted six ordinances and resolutions calling for paving, sewers and sidewalks.

According to plans of council this work will be rushed as quickly as possible to make possible the use of the streets by the middle of the summer.

To carry out this program council passed an ordinance empowering the city engineer to employ six more assistants in preparing the estimates necessary before the contracts are let.

Main st. from the Big Four railway to the north line of Columbus st., repaving or resurfacing.

East Center st. from west side of Main st. to west line of Grennell st., repaving or resurfacing and widening.

Lake st. from Prospect st. east to end and Maple ave. from Lake st. south to end of Maple pavement.

CITY COUNCIL ENDS PAY BOOST DISPUTE

Clerks Get Salary Increase, Street Superintendent Job Created

Caution ran over a proposed raise in salary for three city clerks and creation of the office of street superintendent which ended in a deadlock at the last meeting of city council was successfully ironed out last night when the ordinance was given its second and third readings by council.

The ordinance calls for a slight raise in pay of the auditor's clerk, deputy clerk of the municipal court and the file clerk in the same office. The increase amounts to about $4-0 a year.

By a vote of seven to two the ordinance was given its second and third readings. Two members of the council, J. A. Wallace and J. V. Butler, still hold out against the measure. At the last meeting Councilmen Hallman and Good were also opposed to the proposal and T. J. Mund was absent. Last night these three switched over making a large enough vote to suspend the rules and pass the measure.

Contained in the ordinance is a paragraph which calls for the creation of a street superintendent's position at a salary of $-000 per year. The appointment to fill this position rests with the service director who will name his man within the next few days.

Nation's Oldest Statesman, Major Stedman, Celebrates 88th Birthday At His Desk

North Carolina Congressman To Retire After Serving State 60 Years; Served in Confederate Army During Civil War; Still in Good Health

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—The nation's first statesman—Representative Charles Manley Stedman, Democrat of North Carolina—celebrated his eighty-eighth birthday today with the firm declaration that he will retire from public office soon after he has put 60 years behind him.

He will enter upon his tenth term as a member of congress on March 4 and he asserts that he will never be a candidate for public office again. Senator Francis Warren of Wyoming, three years younger and Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes six weeks his junior are the only other officials in high position who approach his age.

Congratulations poured into his office from members of congress, hundreds of North Carolinians and scores of others as Major Stedman drifted into his office to begin his daily tasks as if today were just another day.

No Health Rules

Singularly reticent in discussing himself, Major Stedman once told friends that "My health and happiness are due to providence. For he has no particular rules of health and yet he has never missed a day at his congressional office because of sickness.

Major Stedman is not only the oldest member of the house but is the only Confederate veteran in congress. He has never suffered a previous illness and eats three hearty meals a day. He smoked 10 to 20 black cigars a day and still smokes but not exercised greatly and yet still has the erect bearing of a soldier.

He has but one health hobby—bathing. Not only does he bathe frequently but will wash his face and hands a score of times each day.

Reads Without Glasses

Always a student and reader Major Stedman still reads both night and day without the use of glasses. History is his hobby.

He is fond of birds and the bluebird is his favorite. To him it is an omen of good luck. When he was a Confederate soldier it is said, he predicted victory if the bluebirds came in the

COOKSTON BACKS SAFETY PROPOSAL

Marion County Legislator Introduces Bill for Grade Crossing Protection

Under provisions of a bill introduced in the state legislature yesterday by H. W. Cookston, representative from Marion county, one of any devices approved by the state utilities commission for protection of traffic at railroad grade crossings could be permitted in Ohio.

The bill which will have the support of Mr. Cookston and other legislators interested in promoting traffic safety will probably be referred to either the utilities commission or the highways committee of the house.

The present law relating to this subject limits crossing safety equipment to certain specific devices, such as warning bells, slide arms and a few other forms of mechanism now in use. Should the Cookston bill pass, it will be permissible to use any safety device after official approval by the state commission.

The purpose is to provide every possible protection for both the public and the railroad companies, Cookston said when reached over the telephone at Columbus today.

He stated that he does not know what the general view of the legislators is likely to be on the proposal. Personally, he regards it as a very meritorious measure.

VIOLATORS HELPED

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—Broadway night club proprietors especially those awaiting trial as liquor law violators, were given a pleasant "kick" when they read today that 40 of the most experienced enforcement agents in this district will lose their jobs by Thursday for failure to pass their civil service examinations.

The cabaret owners figure that the lopping of the dry agents from the payroll will also cut off some of the testimony "that was expected to be presented against those awaiting trial. Those to lose their jobs include, it is said, a number of agents who secured evidence in raids on Texas Guinan's, Helen Morgan's and other bright light resorts.

FIREWORKS IN BUCKLEY TRIAL SPUTTERING

Eckhart Says Treasurer Intimated Cooper Interested in Brewery Case Results

TRIAL MAY DRAG ON

Cross-Examination of Federal Agent, State's Star Witness, Begins

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29—Fireworks began sputtering in the trial of Bert T. Buckley, state treasurer on bribery and liquor conspiracy charges as the cross examination of the government's star witness, John F. Eckhart, was begun.

Yesterday, Eckhart said, from the witness stand that Buckley told him that Gov. Myers Cooper and Senator Simeon D. Fess were interestedly watching the results of the Cincinnati brewery case.

On cross examination today, Eckhart declared that Buckley had not made the statement, but had intimated as much.

May Last Longer

As the trial drew into the close of the second day, indications showed that it could hardly be completed this week. At one time during the trial Judge Benson W. Hough admonished both the government and defense attorneys for taking too much time in the examination of exhibits to be introduced as evidence.

Henry Williams, Columbus attorney, conducted the cross examination.

That Gov. Myers Y. Cooper will appear as a government witness in the trial of Buckley became known today as the names of high state officials became linked with the investigation into Cincinnati brewery activities which led to the indictment of Buckley.

John F. Eckhart, assistant prohibition commissioner of the Ohio-Indiana district and the government's other witness took the witness stand at the trial late yesterday afternoon. He told the court how Buckley allegedly offered him $300 a month "protection money" and the job of prohibition commissioner of Ohio if Eckhart would provide "tips" as to when certain breweries in Cincinnati would be inspected. Buckley told him, Eckhart charged that Gov. Myers Y. Cooper and Sen. Simeon D. Fess were anxious to see the case "fixed."

Mention a Silver's Name

Robert Brumbaugh Buckley's chief defense attorney, mentioned the name of Harry D. Silver, director of finance, as the man who was to have approached T. W. N. Woodruff, Eckhart's superior officer. Woodruff, it is said, was never approached.

Eckhart's testimony is expected to

Cooper Receives Federal Subpena

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29—Gov. Myers Y. Cooper was in receipt of a subpena today from the federal government requiring that he produce the letter written to him by Bert T. Buckley, state treasurer, asking that John Eckhart be appointed state prohibition commissioner.

Governor Cooper stated that the subpena did not call for his appearance on the witness stand, but intimated he would do so if the prosecution asked him to.

Harry D. Silver, director of finance in Gov. Myers Y. Cooper's cabinet, declared today that the reference made by attorneys for Bert T. Buckley, state treasurer, on trial on conspiracy charges against the federal government, in their opening argument to the jury, consisted of his referring "two Cincinnati attorneys to Edward Martin, secretary to Senator Simeon D. Fess."

The attorneys referred to were John L. Semmper and Adolph Graeber named as co-conspirators with Buckley, according to Silver. The finance director stated that the attorneys told him they wanted an introduction to William N. Woodruff, federal prohibition administrator. Not knowing Woodruff, I referred them to Martin, Silver said.

LOCAL YOUNGSTERS WARNED BY CHIEF

Hitching Sleds to Automobiles Must Stop, Thompson States

A warning has been issued to coasters by Police Chief J. W. Thompson in regard to the hitching of sleds to the rear of automobiles and trucks.

This practice is against the law, the chief explained, and any youngsters caught breaking this law will be turned over to juvenile authorities. This will be done to protect the motorist from sharing in possible accidents, the chief said.

The race is not always to the swift. Some fellows are in such a hurry to do things that they hate to waste time trying to find out how to do them.

Does his mother realize?

Considerate mothers will act at once.

Constipation will blunt the keenest intellect, and many a child is classed as "dull" through bowels failing to act regularly. They need mother's watchful care.

If your child is listless, dull and out-of-sorts, it means that the stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with constipated waste. Just give a dose of "California Fig Syrup," and soon all the sour bile and irritating poison are moved from the bowels, and the child is bright and energetic again. "California Fig Syrup" cleans and regulates the bowels, and insures pure blood, clear complexion, joyous spirits, a keen brain, healthy appetite and promotes sturdy growth.

To be sure that the Fig Syrup you buy is the genuine, look for the name "California" on the package.—Adv.

DEATHS EXPLAINED

Husband Kills Wife, Then Takes Own; Leaves Note

BOULDER, COLO., Jan. 29—Two tragic lines in a farewell note today explained the deaths of J. E. Kirkbride, 46, brilliant graduate of the University of Colorado law school, and his wife, Frances.

It was a case of "humane" murder and suicide, according to the note.

Kirkbride shot his wife as she lay in bed. He then sent a bullet through his own brain. Mrs. Kirkbride had been a patient in a Denver Psychopathic hospital. On Jan. 7, her husband failed of reappointment to his position as district attorney.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do it you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull gait with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels or liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color, 15c. 30c and 60c.—Ad

Marion, on Routes of Seven Bus Lines, Has Motor Service to All Parts of U. S.

ONCE upon a time a trip to the far west required months of labor and preparation and times the eventful morning came to arrive and a yoke of oxen were to be hitched to a high-wheeled covered wagon and the long and hazardous two or three months' journey would begin.

Weeks of hardship, moving perhaps seven or eight miles per day forced at times, to battle for their lives, risking untold hardships, starvation, thirst and sickness.

It's Different Now

It is a far cry from the covered wagon days to the present day means of transportation.

Today Marion is on the routes of two coast-to-coast bus lines, the Greyhound lines and the Continental Stage the latter recently taken over by the Nerins Transit Co.

To make a western or eastern trip today all one has to do is to throw a few extra clothes in a bag, step down to the next corner and catch a bus for California or New York.

The new modern buses have all the conveniences of a Pullman train. Lavatories and regulation Pullman berths are now being installed in the newer coaches to add to the convenience of the coast-to-coast traveler.

Important Bus Center

Perhaps unknown to most of people, Marion is rapidly becoming one of the leading bus centers in the state. In all seven lines pass through the city, not counting the buses of the Marion Rapid Transit Inc., which recently replaced street cars in the city.

Beside the two coast-to-coast lines, there is the Red Star line, another interstate corporation operating buses between Pittsburgh and Detroit.

Four other lines have Marion as a terminal, operating from this city to Findlay, Galion, Lima and Mt. Vernon.

With seven bus lines, two traction lines and five steam roads passing through the city, Marion has transportation facilities equal to any other inland city of its size in the state.

ROSALIE is just starting a shopping tour, and her first purchase will be a new handbag, for she is greatly dissatisfied with the one she has. Not that there is anything wrong with it, but she feels that she just must have one of the new motor-bags. The motor-bag resembles in design a motor car, even to the doors, which open and reveal powder puff, lipstick, handkerchief and other accessories. The color scheme should be that of the owner's car, although sometimes they are made to match a leather motor coat instead.

"When a sweet tempts me, I light a Lucky Strike."

Rosalie Adele Nelson

Rosalie Adele Nelson,
The Original Lucky Poster Girl

"I'm a 'Lucky Girl' because I've found a new way to keep my figure trim. Whenever the desire for a sweet tempts me, I light up a Lucky Strike. It's remarkable how nicely the toasted flavor of Luckies satisfies me. Toasting has taken out all impurities—all that is left is the thrilling Lucky aroma. I certainly am lucky to be 'The Lucky Girl.'"

ROSALIE ADELE NELSON

THE modern common sense way—reach for a Lucky instead of a fattening sweet. Thousands are doing it—men keep healthy and fit, women retain a trim figure.

Lucky Strike, the finest tobaccos, skilfully blended, then toasted to develop a flavor which is a delightful alternative for that craving for fattening sweets.

Toasting frees Lucky Strike from impurities. 20,679 physicians recognize this when they say Luckies are less irritating than other cigarettes. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

A reasonable proportion of sugar in the diet is recommended, but the authorities are overwhelming that too many fattening sweets are harmful. So, for moderation's sake we say:—

"REACH FOR A LUCKY INSTEAD OF A SWEET."

BUILDS BUS BODIES

School Conveyances Added to Products of Cook Wagon Co.

The Cook Wagon Co., 342 North Prospect st., has just completed its first coach body for school busses. The body was built on a Chevrolet chassis for the Grand Prairie school board.

This is the second bus body built at the Cook plant for the Grand Prairie board. The plant has also turned out a number of bodies for other school boards in the county. The one recently completed, however, includes new features that hitherto have not been built into bodies by the local company.

Blacksmithing, wood working, upholstering and painting are all done in the local plant, according to George W. Cook, head of the company. At present the plant here is doing chiefly wagon, automobile body work and building truck bodies. It is probable, however, that school bus bodies will be added as another line to the output of the local plant, Cook said today.

The Doctor Took One Look— "FLU"

He had a bit of a headache and a couple of chills—but pshaw!—it was only a "slight" cold and he'd shake it off! That was yesterday. Today he was in bed, burning with fever one moment and the next shivering with chill. The doctor took one look and—"Flu!"

Nearly every case of "flu" starts with a cold. Do what you can to avoid colds. Stay out of crowds as much as you can. Avoid sneezers and coughers. But—if you catch cold—lose no time in breaking it up.

At the first sign of a cold, take HILL'S CASCARA-QUININE. These famous tablets break up a cold in one day because they:

1. Check the Cold Germs
2. Allay the Fever
3. Open the Bowels
4. Tone the system

Those are the four effects you want for safety, and only Hill's supplies them.

Idea Behind Television, Rather Than Detail, Now Important Feature; Real Progress Made

Dozen Radio Stations Now Broadcasting Pictures, Says De Forest Head

(Editors Note—Here is the second of three exclusive articles dealing with the interesting subject of Television and the progress this new invention is making.)

BY JAMES L. KILGALLEN
Copyright, 1929
International News Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—Real progress is being made in television according to James W. Garside, president of the De Forest Radio Co. and president of newly formed Jenkins Television Corp. who believes that the transmission of motion pictures by radio into the home will in the not too distant future be a daily actuality.

"Today we have television in the form of radio movies—little silhouette pictures or cartoons—placed on the air," said Garside. "These images are reproduced in black-and-white or silhouette form on the television screen.

Enjoyable Images

"They are an enjoyable as the simple cartoons on the motion pictures screen. The idea, rather than the fine detail, is the important feature, while there is the thrill of taking these fleeting images out of space.

"Yet just as broadcasting has progressed step by step from the crude musical detail and phonographic reproductions of the early days, so must our television programs improve step by step as transmitter and receiver are defined."

Mr. Garside said that at the present time there are close to a dozen stations broadcasting television pictures and these stations for the most part, he emphasizes are short-wave transmitters—covering hundreds and even thousands of miles, as compared with the rather limited range of broadcasting stations.

"While for the most part the images are of the simplest nature," he explained, "some surprising detail is obtained with some signals even though we are limited to a 48 line image, which makes for a relatively coarse screen.

"We can well imagine what this means if we make a comparison with a newspaper half-tone engraving. Our television images are usually limited to less than 1½ inches square. Imagine our limiting our newspaper half-tones to 1½ inches square, with 48 dots to the linear inch and expecting detail.

Only Silhouettes

"Close-ups of heads, hands, big type matter and other simple forms can be woven into that small space, but nothing requiring any degree of detail. Hence just so long as we are limited to a 48-line image because of temporary wave band restrictions, we shall have to be contented either with attractive black-and-white or silhouette pictures, or crude half-tone pictures of very small size.

"Of course television technique is limited today. But so was sound broadcasting a half a dozen years ago. Many of us recall the time when the broadcasting of a band was either a riot of noises, or simply picked out of a half a dozen pieces to represent the band. The microphone simply could not handle more.

"We also recalled how leading musicians avoided the microphone for fear of having their art literally murdered by the crudities of broadcasting. We recall how the early loudspeakers reproduced all music in little more than an octave or two of musical range, so that the voices of basso or soprano came in about the same except for the announcement that they were really different."

Technique Limited Today, but So Was Sound Broadcasting Few Years Ago

(In the third and final article of this series Mr. Garside will tell of interesting laboratory experiments having to do with the development of television).

Dinner at Noon

The annual picnic dinner will get started at 12 o'clock noon. It will be a potluck dinner.

At 1:30 o'clock there will be community singing led by Paul C. Smith. This is expected to continue until about 2 o'clock, when there will be an address by Miss Verna Elsinger, director of home and community work of the Ohio Farm Bureau. Miss Elsinger will talk on the work of her department in the state.

Between the address by Miss Elsinger and the main address of the meeting by Mr. Weed there will be special music by Mrs. Vera Koons, of Marion.

Mr. Weed has not made known the subject of his address but it will undoubtedly concern the work of the Farm Bureau in Ohio during the last few years. Mr. Weed has gained a reputation as a speaker during his work with the Farm bureau and his talk will be of especial interest to all Farm bureau members.

AL SMITH TO PAY VISIT TO HOOVER

Arrangements Made by Raskob for Rivals To Meet at Miami Beach

and William F. Kenny, the Pythias to his Damon, arrived in Miami on Sunday. They came from Sarasota, without, as Kenney naively put it, having seen a newspaper for days. Kenny said that neither he nor his guest knew that Mr. Hoover was in Miami.

But once here the question immediately arose as to whether the defeated candidate for the presidency would call on the successful candidate. Worried and harassed secretaries searched the records in vain. There was no precedent. Would Smith visit the president-elect voluntarily or would Mr. Hoover issue him a special invitation to do so? The books on political and social equity afforded no solace.

While all Miami debated the question with undisguised interest Smith was becoming choleric over the questions that were being fired at him hourly by the reporters. Was he or was he not going to see Mr. Hoover? It was embarrassing to the former governor and no less so to Mr. Hoover.

Mr. Hoover finally broke the ice. Informed officially that his erstwhile rival was in close proximity, he issued a brief statement—one of the few he has authorized since his election—which said that he would be "most happy" to receive the former governor should he find time to call.

It was not a formal invitation, because it was not addressed to Smith. The statement, such as it was, was issued to newspaper correspondents who immediately communicated it to the Democratic candidate.

Would he call on Mr. Hoover? Always non-committal, he would think it over and "get in touch later." He was on vacation and the persistent queries annoyed him exceedingly. However, John J. Raskob telephoned Hoover headquarters on Belle Isle last night and advised that if convenient, the Democratic candidate for the presidency would pay a formal call today, on the Republican candidate. Hoover headquarters agreed with alacrity. There were standing orders that Mr. Hoover would make any engagement that the erstwhile governor cared to name. And so it was settled—much to the relief of all concerned.

Only a few engagements were made for Mr. Hoover today outside of that with Governor Smith.

Wearing his famous brown derby of campaign days, a cigar cocked jauntily at an angle and at perfect ease, Governor Smith made his call.

Congratulates Hoover

He was graciously received at the Hoover retreat on Belle Isle and for 25 minutes, the victor and the vanquished in the most memorable campaign the country ever saw, sat in the sun parlor of the Hoover home and chatted.

The governor congratulated Mr. Hoover on his election.

"I congratulated him, wished him luck and I meant it," said "Al" when he emerged from the Hoover home.

"What did you talk about, otherwise?" the governor was asked.

"Oh, we had a general talk," he replied. "He told me some of the funny things that happened during the campaign, and I told him some."

It was a few minutes before 11 o'clock when "Al" rolled up to No. 8 Belle Isle in a big blue Rolls Royce which has been loaned to him during his stay here by Joseph M. Smoot, president of the Miami Jockey club. He was accompanied only by his vacation friends, John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, and William F. Kenney of New York.

Wears His Derby

Governor Smith had not had his breakfast. Always a late riser, he arose this morning with just time to keep his date with Mr. Hoover at 11 o'clock. There wasn't time for breakfast.

The handful of secret service operatives and newspaper men who constituted the informal reception committee gasped when they saw "Al" step from the big blue car, pull his brown derby a little more firmly on his head and start up the short walk of the Italian villa where the Hoovers live. He hasn't heretofore been wearing the "bronzer" in Miami, but he got it out this morning for his call on the president-elect. He wore a morning coat and striped trousers under a black overcoat.

The governor led the way up the walk, followed by Raskob and Kenny.

Met by Secretary

They were met at the door by Lawrence Richey, Mr. Hoover's secretary, who accompanied them into the sun-parlor where Mr. Hoover was waiting to receive them. Richey made the introductions. There were no others present.

There meeting was easy, cordial and friendly. If there was any constraint it apparently disappeared in the first few minutes of conversation, in which the Democratic candidate congratulated Mr. Hoover on his election. This apparently broke the ice, and thereafter they good-humoredly discussed incidents of the campaign. The governor was smiling when he came out after 25 minutes.

Mr. Hoover, in white flannels and a blue coat, accompanied his visitor to the door. The governor stepped in the Blue Rolls with Kenney and Raskob and they whirled away to their hotel at Coral Gables for a belated breakfast before proceeding on to the Miami race track, where "Smith Day" was being celebrated in the governor's honor.

Photographers Barred

Apparently the only feeling of restraint about Governor Smith's call had to do with the publicity attendant upon it.

By order of Mr. Hoover, all photographers were barred, although he has been photographed with other visitors to his winter home. Also by order of Mr. Hoover, only two newspapermen were permitted to go near the house during the call.

It had been arranged for Governor Smith to stop at press headquarters, about a block away from the Hoover home, after his call. But after getting near here the car [illegible] morning—and if they sang victory came.

Major Stedman Plans To Retire After 60 Years in Congress

Though Major Stedman will not discuss styles or the trend of the young generation, he does sigh for the "good old days."

"Life is not as beautiful as it once was," he has told friends.

Born in Pittsboro, N. C., Jan. 29, 1841, he was graduated from the University of North Carolina, but before he received his diploma he was serving in the Confederate army. He campaigned with Gen. Robert E. Lee and was wounded three times. Entering the practice of law he attained prominence in North Carolina, was elected lieutenant governor, barely defeated for governor, and came into the 61st congress in 1911.

Recalling the days of 1861, Major Stedman today assisted in the organization of a new chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, the chapter being organized by Mrs. Charles Fisher Taylor, formerly of Goldsboro, N. C.

Congratulations were extended to him from the floor of the house by both Republicans and Democrats.

SHE'S THRILLED BY FIRST SLEIGH RIDE

Marion Girl Writes Account of 40-Minute Trip in "Cutter"

ing was the only way to travel and the snows seemed to be deeper and last longer than now.

Past Greenwood Street school, and down Vernon Heights blvd, the sleighers went, keenly aware that it is much colder out in the heights where there are not so many houses. No wonder "the girls of '76" didn't have to use rouge. A ride in one of those open jobs guarantes a rosy complexion for hours.

Given Clear Track

Machines gave right-of-way to the sleigh, one of them, a Whippet coupe, driven by a man interested in Scouting, giving so much right-of-way that it nearly side-swiped a curbing.

Sleighs of all kinds are disappearing too fast to suit the younger people who want to make up sleigh-riding parties on snowy evenings. Sleighs just can't be found, and the people who have the chance to go riding should seize the opportunity before the chance goes on to some one else.

Sleighing, as far as one girl in town is concerned, is the one old-time pastime that wouldn't bore the children of today to tears.

CHANGE IN WEATHER SET FOR WEDNESDAY

Slow Rise In Temperature May End in Rain, Forecast States

Generally fair and continued cold tonight is the prediction sent out by the United States weather bureau for Marion and vicinity. Wednesday, the report says the temperature will start a slow rise which may end with rain.

Yesterday the temperature rose to 31 degrees for the highest mark during the day and last night settled back to six degrees above zero for the coldest mark.

One year ago yesterday the mercury fell to zero and 20 degrees was the highest recorded during the day.

Should rain fall before the present snow disappears farmers throughout the county say that there would be grave danger of a flood, as the ground is saturated at the present time.

CATARRH GONE! OTHER ILLS FALL BEFORE KONJOLA

Remarkable Recovery Is Reported — Complication Yields Quickly To Astounding Powers of New Medicine.

MR. DANIEL R. COOK

Almost incredible are many of the recoveries through Konjola, the new medicine. Not a day passes but that indorsements pour in, many of them from men and women who had abandoned hope before they found this super-compound. Take this astonishing case, for example:

"My case was desperate," says Mr. Daniel R. Cook, R. F. D. No. 10, Lancaster, Ohio. "When I started with Konjola I expected to take at least a dozen bottles, even though it was no wonderful as everyone said it was, for nothing in eight years had helped my stomach or kidney troubles, nor the neuritis. Catarrh I had from childhood. Well, two bottles of this splendid medicine fairly knocked me off my feet when I realized that my stomach and kidneys were working as they should. Then the neuritis faded away day by day, and my amazement and astonishment my head began to clear up. As I went ahead with the treatment my former health returned; I am gaining in weight and strength, and as yet I can scarcely realize that I am the man who suffered agonies with neuritis and the horrors of catarrh for eight years. No words of mine could possibly express my amazement and delight over this medicine of all medicines under the sun."

Konjola is different than any other known remedy in this section. It contains 22 juices extracted from natural plants, which invigorate the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels to a more healthy action. The effect of this Konjola on the entire system brings amazing relief in cases of suffering that has been going on for years. At the same time, many weak and rundown systems have been restored to a new state of health through this compound. Much a vast number of men and women in this city have told of their experiences with this new medical compound, until now, Konjola is the most highly indorsed medicine that is known in this section.

Konjola is sold in Marion at Stump & Sams Pharmacy and by all the best druggists throughout this section.—Adv.

Five Washington doctors have been arrested for violating the prohibition law. Honestly, doesn't it seem as though just about everybody is doing it?

A citizen of Brooklyn who slapped his wife has been sentenced to kiss his mother-in-law. Doesn't this come under the heading of cruel or unusual punishments?

Senator Bruce says he has seen no less than 10,000 cocktails and glasses of wine served during the last six years. Take it from us, the senator must be some real social favorite.

Now were that missing New York boy, six feet and seven inches tall, addicted to the playing of a slide trombone, the work of the metropolitan police would be considerably simplified.

Speaking about loving people for the enemies they have made, it may be pointed out that neither Senator Norris nor Senator Nye have any particular liking for Secretary of the Interior Roy O. West.

There is no teacher like experience. It's a pretty safe proposition that the next time the three prisoners, who escaped from Sing Sing only to be recaptured, plan a getaway, they will figure on pulling it off in the summer season.

Texas Guinan's brother has been indicted in New York for maintaining a nuisance in the shape of a night club. From all reports, that kind of a charge might be made to apply to the other side of the family.

Two couples, the brides being sisters, were married in an airplane sailing over St. Louis, one day last week, but they will probably pull off their divorce court stunts in the same old way.

"The great tragedies in history," says the Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, "have not been caused by weakness, but by the abuse of power." While there may be those who do not fancy some of the Rev. Harry's religious views, there's no questioning his interpretation of the lessons of history.

The government pension bureau insists that a citizen of Iowa must prove that he is alive or lose his civil war pension. To prove that they are alive from the neck up might prove a real job for some people.

The gatekeeper at a high school basketball contest out in Paoli, Indiana, was held up and robbed of the receipts. It might prove hard to convince the two thugs who pulled off the job that education doesn't pay.

A Worthy Organization.

The membership of Bird-McGlunis Post, No. 162, American Legion, was 267 last year. It is estimated that there are 1,962 in the county eligible to membership, fully 1,800 of them being located in Marion.

Why so small a proportion of those eligible are not enrolled in an organization so commendable as the Legion is a mystery of mysteries.

The objects and aims of the American Legion are so praiseworthy; the work it is doing is so good; the influence for peace its members are exercising—an influence the stronger because only those who have had the experience really know the horrors of war and appreciate to the full the blessings of peace—is so strong, that it is hard to understand how any one eligible has not become enrolled in its membership.

The post is now engaged in enrolling new members for the present year. In that work it should have the encouragement of the entire community. There is need for such an organization as the American Legion, and as the years pass the need for it will become stronger. With the stronger need, there should be a correspondingly stronger organization throughout the land, and the local body should in no way be an exception to the rule.

The American Legion is doing a great work for patriotism, for peace and for law and order, and we as a people should give our whole-hearted support and encouragement to an organization committed to these ends.

We sincerely wish the local post all possible success in its work as planned, now and hereafter, and hope that those qualified to strengthen it numerically and add their influence to the accomplishment of its aims will not longer permit themselves to remain aloof, but array themselves with those already enrolled in its membership.

It Rivals Any Saga of the Sea.

Reading the thrilling story of the splendid seamanship displayed in the rescue of the thirty-two men aboard the Florida, one involuntarily compares it with the lack of seamanship which permitted over a hundred of those aboard the Vestris to go to watery graves.

It is true that the morale of a well-trained crew aboard a staunch, seaworthy vessel may naturally be anticipated, all other things equal, to be superior to that of a crew aboard a sinking vessel, especially so when the crew on the latter has been battling death for two days under the handicap of the knowledge that their vessel was hardly fit for service when it left port.

But even with this difference considered, it is not wholly unfair to consider the difference displayed in the boat-handling of the crew of the America and that of the Vestris, for the reason that there were a number of handicaps encountered by the America's crew with which the crew of the Vestris did not have to contend. Although the latter had been buffeted by wind and wave for the better part of two days, there was very little wind and not much of a sea when attempt was made to lower her lifeboats. And even under those conditions, it took over an hour to put over those which were launched and several of them were capsized.

In the case of the America, but a few minutes were consumed for the launching of the rescue lifeboat, which was perfectly done although there was a mighty sea and the wind was blowing a full gale, and the trip to and from the Florida is today the marvel of the shipping world.

Yes, there was a difference between conditions on the two vessels, but the chief difference was in the crews and their trainings, a difference which may mean the difference between life and death to those who go to sea.

We have long felt that it is the duty of Americans to patronize American vessels, whenever it is possible, when making ocean voyages. We have held it out as a patriotic duty. As the months and years pass and stories of wonderful rescues come over the wires, rescues such as those accomplished by the President Harding, the President Roosevelt and now this of the America, we feel that Americans owe another duty. In the face of such exploits as that of Chief Executive Officer Manning and his boat crew, exploits rivaling for courage, skill and daring any of those depicted in the sagas of the sea, we feel that Americans should realize that to travel in American boats is not only a patriotic duty, but a duty, also, which they owe to themselves and to those to whom they are dear.

"I found the snow cleaned off the walks in front of the homes of two ministers out our way, yesterday," remarked the fellow who lives next door on the way down town this morning, "which is my idea of an example of practical Christianity."

The New School Board Member.

The reaction of the local public to the course of the board of education in naming Harry J. Barnhart to succeed to the vacancy on the board caused by the resignation of V. C. Smith, is decidedly complimentary to him, for his selection seems to be universally popular throughout the community.

Mr. Barnhart is yet far from the crest of the hill on the journey of life, and is capable, active and alert—qualities more often found to be attributes of one of his years than of those who are viewing life's setting sun. He is interested in one of our largest and most successful industrial concerns and in the city generally, and thus he has appreciation of how much high-class public schools mean to the community.

It would not be at all surprising should the new member prove especially valuable on the board at this time when it has before it a very considerable building program. As an engineer, his knowledge of materials and mechanics, thus contributed to the board, should prove very advantageous.

It has been testified that a seven-mile cinder path along Chicago's drainage canal cost $1,062,000, owing to the fact that it was a "political" job, labor being overpaid and materials being purchased by orders under $500 to evade competitive bidding. It will not take a chart to make the process understandable in these parts.

The Chicago police rounded up 500 more suspects Saturday, making about 4,000 in a week, and yet there is a suspicion that the Windy City's supply of law-breakers is in no sense of the word near exhaustion.

Former State's Attorney Arlie Boswell, of Williamson county, Illinois, together with a former county coroner, a former police chief and a bootlegger have been found guilty at East St. Louis of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, while the former police chief of Marion in the same state was acquitted, which, from all reports, seems to be about the ratio of law-breakers to law-abiding citizens out that way.

The Kentucky girl, who broke into the rays of the spot-light by slapping a preacher who criticized bobbed hair, is facing a three-year penitentiary sentence for shooting at the wife of a Whitesburg merchant. Having tasted notoriety once, they seldom are satisfied without it.

The Rev. E. S. Shumaker, superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon league, has been granted another thirty-day stay from the sixty-day prison farm sentence imposed on him by the United States district court in order that his case may be carried to the United States supreme court. Should the reverend doctor finally be made to serve out his sentence, he might possibly get an idea of what one of those life-for-a-pint Michigan sentences means.

Regulate the Temperature.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

It is important to keep the air of the home fresh and sweet. This is just as necessary in the winter time in northern climates as it is in the summer. You know how quickly flowers will droop and die unless they have fresh, cool air. If it is too cold they freeze just as your family would, but if you exercise common sense in such matters, you and yours will thrive.

I can not resist saying that man does not common sense in almost everything except the care of his health. It would seem the natural thing to look after the body, to give it the same attention that plants, the automobile and the golf clubs have. But the body does not get one half the attention that most of our material possessions receive.

Endless experiments have been made in an attempt to find out what degree of temperature is best for health. As in almost everything else, science has forced us to revise a lot of our old ideas.

It is believed now that what we usually describe as over-heating does not decrease the power to work. The ability to do hard work is present, but the inclination to do it is not there.

In either case the result is the same. It takes a lot of character for a man to work when he doesn't feel like it. It requires the stimulation cool air gives the skin, to whip the unwilling spirit into eagerness to work.

On this account the living and work rooms should be kept fairly cool. Most writers mention 68 degrees as the proper temperature. That is too low to suit me. For my comfort and happiness seventy or seventy-two degrees is about right.

Not only is temperature important, but the moisture or humidity of the air must be considered. If the air is too dry it is irritating and distressing. The skin and other tissues of the body lose moisture, because it is expelled into the air. In consequence the nose and mouth feel dry and parched.

A pan of water placed on the stove, the radiator, or in connection with the hot air furnace, will help a lot to give moisture to the air. Open windows overcome the drying effects of heating. A narrow space at top or bottom of the window will do much to give the proper amount of humidity. If this is covered by a screen of cloth it will break unpleasant drafts of air.

Free movement of the air is important. This stimulates the skin and does much to prevent unpleasant effects of a warm atmosphere.

Sunlight is essential. Dust and vapors should be guarded against.

Give thought to these things and the Winter will pass without the ill effects it may have produced in other years.

Insect Gladiators.

BY TEMPLE MANNING.

The training of an insect must be a very ticklish business. In America, skillful men spend all their time in training fleas. "The Flea Circus" is a popular exhibit in most of the side-shows. In China, however, the insect act is not the trained fleas of America. The Chinese delight in cricket fighting, almost as much importance is laid on a championship bout as the Americans lay in the heavyweight championship.

The crickets are specially trained and bred for the purpose. It takes a number of generations to produce a champion fighter. Their diet consists of lettuce, beans, rice and fish, chopped fine. Before the battle they are fed mosquitos which have been specially fattened for the purpose of being gorged on human blood. This is, of course, to render them more ferocious.

The insects are kept in large jars of earthenware or in elaborately decorated gourds, which are covered with perforated lids. These are of jade, ivory or fine wood. Tiny dishes of the finest porcelain hold their food, while they sleep on a wee bed. The reason for all this grandeur in connection with a mere insect is this: The Chinese don't believe that they are "mere insects." The champion fighting crickets are, they think, the reincarnations of famous warriors, long dead.—Copyright, 1928, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Editorial Opinion.

OKLAHOMA'S POPULAR SPORT.

In Oklahoma the impeachment of the governors seems to have become an established custom. Three of the state's chief executives have been impeached in recent years. Does the state elect particularly unfit men or is impeachment part of Oklahoma's ordinary political drama? Opinions on this point differ.

Thirteen months ago the supreme court of Oklahoma thwarted an effort to impeach the present governor, Henry H. Johnson, at a special session of the legislature, but now the legislature is regularly in session and the old charges against the chief executive have been revived and some new ones added for good measure. Eight articles of impeachment thus far have been voted by the popular branch of the legislature. The governor is accused chiefly of making illegal appointments, of improper use of his official prerogatives, or corrupt favoritism and of abuse of the pardoning power.

To make the case the more bizarre, it is charged further that the governor is a wealthy and an erratic person dominated by his secretary, a woman of forceful and a mystic who belongs to an oriental cult. The secretary is not on trial, but the senate has been investigating some of the alleged corrupt transactions in which she is said to have played an active part.

Oklahoma's popular sport of impeaching its governors readily may become a demoralizing pastime. Suspicion that factional politics rather than devotion to law and justice has prompted some of its past impeachment proceedings at least should have the effect of inducing the senate to give Governor Johnston a conspicuously fair trial. And failure to impeach an occasional governor might tend to induce better men to seek that office in Oklahoma. —Chicago News.

THE NICARAGUAN CANAL.

The present congress has better use for the little time remaining to it than discussing the construction of a canal across Nicaragua. That can wait. The United States has an option on the site for all time. Whether it starts digging or surveying this year or ten years hence will have no effect on its right to build a Nicaraguan canal, when it decides that one is needed.

The governor of the Canal zone points out in his last report that the Panama canal is being used to forty-five or fifty per cent. of its capacity, as at present constructed; and that this capacity can be enlarged seventy per cent. by adding another flight of locks and developing a supplementary water supply. All the transisthmian canal traffic that is likely to offer for a good many years to come can thus be handled without digging a second canal. Other considerations are involved; but the dominant consideration should be commercial need—and in this connection those who argue that the government would be wiser to devote its engineering skill and surplus funds to enlarging inland waterways for the benefit of American agriculture, appear to have reason on their side.

Anyway, we are about to have as president a man whose professional training has equipped him to judge of the engineering problems involved in building a Nicaraguan canal, as well as of the economic demand for such a canal; and who, moreover, was recently in Nicaragua and had an opportunity to size up other angles of the question. The congress would do well to leave the Nicaragua canal to Mr. Hoover and to devote its own time to matters that are crying out for immediate attention.—Detroit Free Press.

McIntyre on Vacation.

BY O. O. MCINTYRE.

Paris, Jan. 29 — Last night I went completely Bohemian and attended one of those arty affairs in a candle-sputtering studio high up on Montmartre hill. The earnest young American who took me declared it was just a weekly grouping of those tasting the joy of creation.

Most of us stood while a few sprawled on the floor in the cobwebby dinginess, "feeling the happy hurt of beauty." A billowy lady in a seagreen robe finally billowed in, greeted us and read a paper on the gloom of Dostoevski and — wouldn't you guess it? — the whimsicalities of Barrie.

It was a typical crowd of the Latin Quarter —soulful-eyed boys in flowing ties who write odes to a passionate petunia or something, girls who paint egg plants in heroic sizes, also other things that resemble the insides of alarm clocks. I seemed to be the only one without an "urge," but I do wash my neck at times.

These are the pale dreamers who declare work must come first, then borrow and bilk to sit around all day drinking picon and smoking cigarets in front of the Dome and Rotonde. There are smocks of apple green, orange and pale lavendar, symbolic of defying those silly taboos—the conventions.

And there was one young man whose throat was wrapped in a pink muffler and stood all evening with an elbow resting on a mantle and holding a blue bottle. He was, I was told in awed whispers, a meditationist, but I feel sure he must have a flair for interior decoration also.

It is easy to laugh at such amusing posings, yet it is often only a passing phase of youth —like melancholy and puppy love. Great painters, sculptors and writers have wasted precious hours in such flapdoodle and awakened later to do real serious and immortal work. Harry Leon Wilson and Booth Tarkington were once young idlers in front of Du Dome.

Yet, leaving the studio gathering at midnight and wandering down through the open square of the Place de Tertre and narrow Rue Leipic with their rowds of wine-guzzling and merry-making students from all over the world, it seems a wonder even the slight few among those who come here to "create" actually achieve anything at all.

And one can not laugh off the profusion of young American best-selling novelists "dawdling" in Paris for the past ten years. It has been the germinating ground for what, if not the best, is certainly the most original in literature of the period. There is everything in Paris, aside from its leisurely manner, to win one from work, but just the same there has arisen such promising writers as Ernest Hemingway, Glenway Wescott, Stephen Vincent Benet, Michael Arlen and Louis Bromfield. Many think Scott Fitzgerald did his best scrivening on this side of the Atlantic. And Arlen wrote "The Green Hat," his best work, here.

My impression is the greatest impetus for the writer and artist here is vastly more material than spiritual. Living in certain areas is very cheap if one knows the ropes. No one can write easily with the wolf snarling on the doorstep. Another splendid thing is the individualistic effort Paris demands. There is no log rolling Paris group—I must slip in this dig—no Algonquin movement.

One of the unpleasant features of Paris for the Yank is the attitude of shop-keepers. When an American crosses the threshold prices automatically jump. We do not exhibit that spirit toward the French in America. The weak-kneed American papers here make no issue of it, as they should. In fact, once when I dwelt on the painful topic a Paris journal in a spasm of editorial pouting wondered how I would feel should France deny me its hospitality.

And that is elegant hooey. France's touted hospitality is sheer blah. The American who comes here pays—and dearly—for everything. The fact he is an American makes him a shining mark for French trickery. If bowing, fluttering and cooing as a prelude to doubling prices is hospitality, the French have it. But we like them just the same.

The argument is advanced this spirit is shown only by tradesmen. Well, whom else does the American meet? Certainly no Frenchman invites an American to his home.

Marvels of Motion.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"I can readily understand that the earth rotates; but if so, then why do the 'heavier-than-air' flying machines when in mid-air, not rotate with it? Surely the friction of the atmosphere, which travels with the earth, is not so great as to overcome the force of inertia and thus keep the machine traveling at the same rate as the earth—1,500 feet per second. I am sure an explanation would be appreciated by your amateur-science readers. —Wm. L. Dejon, Chicago."

There is in this question a very common error. Many people will persist in thinking that a flying machine must cast off all connection with the earth when it mounts up into the air. The fact is that the machine remains effectively a part of the earth when it is in the air just as much as when it is on the ground. The atmosphere rotates together with the solid globe on which it rests, and whatever is in the air rotates along with the air. It is not the air that pushes the flying machine onward in the direction of the earth's rotation, but it is the very thing you speak of, the inertia of the machine itself.

Before the machine rises from the ground it is traveling round with the surface of the earth, just as is the air above it. When it goes up into the air it retains the inertia of the motion which it partook with the earth when it was on the ground. The air having the same motion of rotation, does not oppose the inertial motion of the machine, which rests in it like a cork in a current of water. Both atmosphere and machine possessing the same rotational motion as that of the earth, there is no disturbance of that relation when the machine quits the earth and goes up into the atmosphere.

If the machine could rise high enough to the difference between the linear speed of the rotating atmosphere at a great height, and its speed at the earth, surface to become apparent, then, only, the atmosphere would tend to hasten the machine onward in the direction of the earth's rotation. But there are so many internal motions in the atmosphere—winds and currents—that these principles are not everywhere and always directly applicable. If the machine could shoot up through the atmosphere, it would still retain the inertia derived from its original rotation with the earth.

If it started from the equator and went immediately as far away as the moon without any loss of inertia, it would tend to revolve as a satellite around the earth. But its velocity would be considerably less than half the velocity of the moon in her orbit—1,500 against 3,550 feet per second—and this would be insufficient to enable it to keep going around the earth orbitally. Gravity would bring it back to ground in a spiral track with the same west-to-east motion that it had in common with the earth's surface before it started on its record-breaking flight.

We must not forget, however, that no flying-machine could get above the atmosphere, unless it was impelled on the principle of the rocket, which, contrary to a common notion, doesn't need air to push against.—Copyright, 1929, International Feature Service, Inc.

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

The football season has been over for some months, save for the big California game. Baseball will be under way for a new season soon. Looking back over one season of major athletics and contemplating another, one wonders whether the American people aren't a little off balance, a little warped and cramped as to perspective in the matter of athletics. It would seem to be pretty hard for any normal boy to go through high school and not come naturally to believe that studies and scholarship are matters of incidental interest to be found entirely on the edges of the great central interest in athletics. The big things in the high school lad's mind are the football season, the football team, the football record.

This attitude is by no means wholly the fault of the boy. Teachers think and talk too much about sports. Parents think and talk too much about sports. Everybody knows there should be enough exercise to keep the body in good order. Everybody believes in whetting the spirit and the mind by means of contest, but to make athletics first is to miss the main point of education and character building.

LENIENCY? SURE!

Man Gets 20 to 35 Years in Pen After Promise

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29—It may have been legal leniency, but it was much different—literally—to King Williams, 20, negro.

Judge Charles M. Rogers of the Franklin county common leas court told Williams, as he passed sentence that "the court will extend you leniency," and forthwith told the prisoner he was sentenced to serve 20 to 35 years in Ohio penitentiary.

Williams, a paroled prisoner from the Mansfield reformatory, had been convicted of burglary of an inhabited dwelling during the night time. Judge Rogers could have sentenced the negro to life imprisonment under the Ohio code.

Program of Exceptional Merit Is Presented for Lecture-Recital Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Knox Dunlop and Mrs. K W. Povenmire Appear with Club Members in Musical Entertainment at Hotel Harding Ballroom

BY HALLIE HOUCK
Marion Star Staff Writer

A charmingly well balanced program of more than usual quality was given last night by members of the Marion Lecture Recital club and their guests, Mr and Mrs Knox Dunlop of this city and Mrs K W Povenmire of Waldo before a capacity audience in the ballroom of Hotel Harding

Most musical programs have an outstanding number, but the groups last night were so well chosen and capably presented that it is practically impossible to accord any one a higher rank than the others

A delightful group of vocal numbers, sung by a blended trio of voices Mrs Knox Dunlop and Mrs C L Rutherford sopranos, and Mrs Earl N Hale contralto opened the program The numbers chosen by the group included 'Lift Thine Eyes to the Mountains' Mendelssohn, 'When the Roses Bloom' Reichardt, 'Sleep Little Treasure arranged by Clough Leighter and 'O Lady Fenet Thy Silken Thread" Strickland

Piano Selections

The first of two piano numbers was the exquisite duo The Barcarolle Schyth played by Mrs Clyde Coulter and Mrs Harry I Williams

Then came the vocal selections by Knox Dunlop one of the newcomers to Marion with a voice of huge quality which has volume and depth His first number was Mozarts 'Within These Sacred Dwellings' from The Magic Flute' followed by 'Caro Mio Ben Giordani sung in the native tongue The group closed with a recitation, 'Jim Saith The Lord' from Handel's The Messiah" C L Jaynes music director in this city accompanied Mr Dunlop at the piano

Violinist Pleases Audience

One of the pleasant surprises of the program were the violin numbers given by Mrs K W Povenmire of Waldo who not only proved to be an excellent artist but also presented a charming appearance Her numbers were Romance—Dmi Concerto Wieniawski and the ever popular 'Spanish Dance' by Rehseld The light swift touch demanded by this piece showed Mrs Povenmire's ability on the violin Miss Avonelle Schwab fourth accompanied Mrs Povenmire

Mrs Harold K Mouser displayed her usually brilliant piano artistry in 'Venezia—Barcarolle No 1' Liszt The number was in two parts the first an Italian street song and dance and the second a tender passionate love song Mrs Mouser is widely known as a pianist and is music chairman of the Ohio Federation of Women's clubs

Dunlop's Second Group

Mr Dunlop's second group made up of four songs opened with 'By the Sea' Schubert His second selection The Two Grenadiers' Schumann was more than ordinary applause perhaps because of the dramatic closing of the song. Introducing the stirring 'Marseillies' 'Request Franz followed and the group closed with "A Ballynure Ballad an old Irish air sung in a bright amusing manner Mr Jaynes accompanied at the piano Answering to the applause with 'Requiem' Homer Mr Dunlop gave the only encore of the evening. The audience called for encores of the preceding entertainers but the only one given was that by Mr Dunlop

The program closed with 'My Bumbil Capua Quandary Bliss and Dance Song," from William Tell Rossini sung by the trio which opened the program Mrs James C Woods president of the club, played the accompaniments in both groups presented by the trio

The program was splendidly presented and won the praise of the entire audience

Best Remedy for Obstinate Cough Made at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt positive relief than anything else Its no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle

Into a pint bottle pour 2½ ounces of Pinex, then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer better remedy It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it

You can actually feel its penetrating soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes It also promptly loosens the germ laden phlegm and at the same time it is absorbed into the blood where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs and "flu" coughs

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine containing the active agent of creosote in a refined, palatable form and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affections

BY ADELE GARRISON

Lillian Intervenes to Quiet Madge's Doubts

"I DON'T know what the rest of you are planning, but that strikes me as a mighty good example for me to follow." Lillian pointed to the door through which Dicky had carried Junior a minute before. "Come on, Madge, you must be as tired as I am, after that terrible drive of ours. Let's look our jools in the safe and retire to rest, carrying the dear old bedroom candle."

I caught the quick glance she sent her husband, guessed that it was a signal, when he queried impudently:

"The rest of us don't need to toddle along, do we, just because you're ready to hit the hay? No, I'm going to stay down here awhile and amuse the gals. How stout it, Madam Graham? How about you, Madge? Wouldn't you like a rubber of whist?"

"If the rest of you don't mind," my mother-in-law said with the apparent self-depreciation which always accompanies any acceptance of an invitation upon her part. But no member of her household ever has the temerity to take her at her word, and I knew that Katherine and Mary would accept Mr. Underwood's invitation with apparent eagerness, and thus leave Lillian and me undisturbed for the interview that I saw my friend wished with me.

She went straight to the point as soon as we were safely in her room with the door locked.

"Madge, you're all dripping about this stunt of Dicky's," she said scathingly as she laid her gift and Marion's on her dresser. "Here, let me take these pesky things before you throw them out of the window."

I handed them to her, and she gave a slow, soft whistle as she looked at them.

"As I live, jade color," she said. "I didn't get a good chance to lamp them before. Isn't that true museline bene-headed for you?"

I nodded miserably. I could not speak, and Lillian, turning, took an unconsciously long time to lay the baubles upon her dresser. By the time she turned back, I had conquered the sobs which were threatening my voice, but I still had no heart to answer her comment.

But she needed no words from me to tell her the especial touch of bitterness given me by Dicky's selection of jade color for the necklace and earrings which were my part of the bizarre wholesale presentation of gifts in which he had just indulged, and which, I was firmly convinced, were simply camouflage for the gift to Edith Fairfax that our inadvertent visit to the office had revealed.

For Lillian knew that my most precious possession was a necklace with real jade, a marvelous piece of Oriental artistry which Dicky had given me upon a very special anniversary of ours. That he should have chosen for my share of his fantastic distribution an imitation of those stones argued a forgetfulness or an obtuseness horrifying to any wife's imagination.

For a long minute she said nothing, but put her hand over mine and held it there. The tightness of her clasp strengthened me, and after a little I looked up at her with a poor attempt at a smile.

"I think I can be counted on now to behave like a human being," I told her.

Comforting Praise

"If you behaved like the ordinary human wife, you'd be in hysterics after having clawed Ede's eyes out and beaten up the Dicky-bird with a rolling pin," she commented grimly. "But you happen to have a veneer of breeding and poise over the primitive, and I don't mind telling you—though praise to the face—you know the rest of it—that you came through splendidly today and tonight. You have the Dicky-bird up in the air. He hasn't the slightest idea whether you believe him or not. Of course he'd like to see you jealous but he knows that a stunt like that in the studio, if it weren't explained satisfactorily, would give him a little more of the green-eyed commodity than would be healthful. Hence the camouflage."

"And still you say," I began wonderingly.

"That you're all dripping about this stunt," she repeated. "Of course you are. Remember, I've known the Dicky-bird longer than you have, and I also know the Fairfax type as well as if I'd jointed her and put her together. Furthermore, I know that are magazine game. So just relax that rigidity, old dear, and listen while I spill you what I believe is the real dirt on this."

"Very well," said Septimius. He was ashamed of his duplicity; but he had to say just those two words, and in just that tone of lofty forbearance. And to Mr. Antinope coldly: "I am quite ready to come along."

The frightful torturing vice which Mr. Antinope carried at the end of his arm loosed its grip.

On the Floor

Without the society of Septimius, Miss Harriet Perkins felt lorn and chilly. But she also felt more adventurous. In a moment she decided to do some prospecting.

The majestic, curving, double companion or stairway leading down from the promenade deck to the main deck was lit by one tiny blue electric star. Beyond it, in the lounge which separated the dining saloon from the owner's state sitting room, were no lights whatever. Harriet remembered the situation of the switches used by Mr. Tunnicliff, and used them, revealing the closed door of the state sitting room. She opened the door, and beheld the scene of her exciting interview with Lord Furber brightly illuminated. Little Mr. Tunnicliff was seated solitary therein, examining a very large sea chart. He jumped up, blushing. The chart sank onto the carpet, waving as it fell.

"All alone?" she said, smiling.

"Yes," said Mr. Tunnicliff, modestly.

She suspected that she had put him into a delicious confusion.

"I came down because I was beginning to feel the cold," said she. "Whose is that fur coat?" She pointed to a garment that lay on a sofa at the end of the room.

"Lord Furber's. It's always left there for him every evening in case he should want it."

Suddenly, perceiving a crushed cigaret end on the carpet, Harriet knelt over it.

"Have you dropped something? Can I find it for you?"

Mr. Tunnicliff was kneeling by her side.

"No," she said. "I was only looking at the hole I burnt in the carpet tonight. Quite a good hole, isn't it? The carpet will never be the same again. But His Lordship didn't seem to mind. In fact, he told me I hadn't burnt any hole. Very polite of him, wasn't it?"

"Yes, it was."

"But he always is polite, isn't he?"

Her eyes smiled. Mr. Tunnicliff's shining eyes smiled in response. He blushed again: but said naught. There he was, kneeling close by her, feeling very self-conscious, yet somehow content; but not daring to rise till she rose. They were like two domestic animals amicably and curiously surveying each other.

"How is Lord Furber now? Have you heard?" Harriet demanded.

"About the same. It seems he's quite conscious. At least he isn't unconscious. Only he doesn't hear anything, or at least he doesn't understand anything, and he can't speak."

"Dazed?"

"Yes."

"Very strange, isn't it?"

"Yes, it is," Mr. Tunnicliff coughed. "What's that chart thing?"

Harriet padded along on her knees toward the chart, and Mr. Tunnicliff did likewise. They pored together over the chart.

"You see, it's the environs of Naples," Mr. Tunnicliff explained. "The coast, that is, and the islands."

"What are all those funny figures in the sea?"

"They're the depths, in fathoms."

"Do you know which way we're going?"

"To Genoa. Genoa isn't on this chart, of course. I think the captain didn't like the Procida channel tonight. He's gone outside all the islands. I don't know why."

This was Mr. Tunnicliff's first volunteered remark. The emission of it seemed to give him ease and a slight confidence in himself; it certainly increased his already considerable charm in the eyes of Miss Perkins.

"Poor boy!" she thought. "I mustn't be too nice to him. It would be cruelty to children. He ought to be in his cradle." Still, she did not get up from the floor.

"Where's Rome?" she asked; her finger wandered over the chart.

"Rome's not on the sheet, either. There aren't any more sheets down here."

"Oh! But I did so want to see Rome."

"There's an atlas here," Mr. Tunnicliff said. "If that would do."

She nodded.

"Shall we look at it?"

Now the atlas was the lowest of a pile of volumes on the floor, and Mr. Tunnicliff padded on his knees toward it, and Miss Perkins padded in his wake. It was a large and heavy atlas, clearly meant to be consulted on floors by students on their hands and knees. Mr. Tunnicliff found southern Italy and then Rome, and he pointed to the mouth of the Tiber and to the town of Ostia, and said that Ostia was the ancient port for Rome.

"What a lot you know!" observed Harriet teasingly. "Why do you look at me like that?"

Their heads were adjacent.

"I was only thinking how nice it would be for me to kiss you," said Tunnicliff, astonishingly.

Harriet had to collect herself.

"You rude little boy!" she protested, but in a tone to indicate that in her opinion they had been playing together on the carpet of a nursery.

"Well," said Mr. Tunnicliff, jumping up in sudden resentment, his cheeks now a deep crimson, "If you want to know, I'm older than I look by a long chalk, and as for little I'm quite the average height. You're tall—for a girl."

Harriet, twisting herself, sat on the floor and raised her glance to him; but he would not meet it.

"That makes it all the worse," said she. "If you're so fearfully old, you're old enough to know better."

"You asked me why I looked at you and I told you," he sulked, his full lower lip drooping. "If you hadn't asked me I shouldn't have said anything. And now I've said it, you don't like it—or at least you pretend you don't. That's a girl all over, that is. You're all the same." He was walking about, hands in pockets.

"And here I was thinking butter wouldn't melt in your mouth!" observed Harriet, leaning back and supporting herself on her arms stretched out behind. "I suppose you've got Spanish blood in your veins."

"I haven't. I'm just as English as you are."

"Perhaps Don Juan came once to England," said Harriet.

"I daresay you think you're very funny."

"I do. But not half as funny as you are." She laughed outright.

"Oh, go to blazes!" Mr. Tunnicliff shockingly exclaimed.

"Mr. Tunnicliff," she said. "I don't mind pointing out what's the matter with you. You've no sense of humor."

"Possibly not," said he, dryly.

"And I wanted you to help me"

"The Honorable Luke"

Mr. Tunnicliff's manner immediately changed. The drooping lips lifted and he smiled.

"Of course if I can do anything——"

"You can, you nice man! What's the name of the wireless operator here?"

"Tunnicliff."

"Same as yours."

"He's my cousin. As a matter of fact, I got him his job."

"How heavenly you are! Have you a visiting card? If so, just write on it what I tell you, and give it to me. I expect your cousin would do simply anything for you?"

"I'm not so sure," said Mr. Tunnicliff, searching his person for a card, which he found. "My cousin's a bit of a Tartar."

"All the better. Now just write this, will you? 'Please do what you can for the bearer, who is in distress.'"

"But are you?"

"Yes. Of course I'm in distress! Would I ask you to write a lie? Aren't we all in trouble, with poor Lord Furber as he is? Where does he live, your Cossack cousin? Somewhere on the top deck, isn't it?"

"I'll go up with you, if you like."

"No. I shouldn't like. Your temper is too uncertain."

"Oh! All right, all right! Here!" He vouchsafed the card. Harriet read on it: "The Honourable Luke John Tunnicliff."

"Ah!" she murmured. "Entertaining angels unawares, was I? And now will you officially lend me Lord Furber's fur coat? I'll bring it back, honest Injun."

She got up from the floor, and he obediently endued her into the rich, warm and not heavy garment.

"How lovely it is!" she murmured, and looked at him. He was assuredly adorable. A baby, naturally, but his eyes honest and luminescent, and what delicate nostrils! As for height, their faces were on a level.

Then in a new tone, she said:

"I think on the whole you may kiss me if you want to."

Mr. Tunnicliff threw his head back.

"No, thanks," he said stiffly. "I don't want to now." His face was darkly lowering again.

"Why?" Harriet showed some rigor.

"I wouldn't kiss any girl for the first time in cold blood," said Mr. Tunnicliff.

"Pish!" Harriet burst out. Then, controlling herself to a gentle irony, "A kiss is nothing."

"Is it?" the youth exclaimed savagely. "You wait—and you'll see."

"You ought to write your memoirs," said teasing Harriet, not so much to daunt Mr. Tunnicliff as to reassure herself by wit. For his kindled eyes were unexampled in her experience.

A Story of Big Business and the Wiles of Women

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

JUBILEE was glad to be let down out of the window by the rope in his teeth today, and that is a sign that summer is coming, even if it is still too far to shoot at. I will be glad when I can go in swimming again, but that won't make any difference about my ant washing my neck and ears every Sunday morning after I have spent all day Saturday in the lake or the river. If I was made of soap my ant would want to splash water on me and wash me. It is not any wonder that I have got the biggest ears of anyone in the bunch. If they all had ants to hang onto their ears while she tried to wash all their features off their faces they would have as big ears as I have got.

Feeble was back in school today. She is looking kind of peaked and she went in the basement to set in one of Mush's wife's chairs till the bell rang, and she told Mush's wife that she was going to get a perfectly gorgeous valentine for Valentine Day. When Mush's wife told her she must be out of her head, Feeble said she would like to know who Mush bought a beautiful valentine for if it wasn't for his wife. So I guess that when Valentine night comes and Mush has not given his wife a valentine he will think the schoolhouse has fell on him and busted him.

Feeble did not say she had seen Mush buying a valentine, but what she said would make anyone think she did. I would think that anyone that has just had the flu would be careful about what they do. If they would do something like that and then have a relapse and die they might not go where they would have went if they hadn't done it.

When we were all going down to the pond with our slays after school Feeble said she would go along with us but that she had promised her mother that she would not slide on her stummick, and I told her she would slide on her stummick if she slid on anybody's, and they all gave her the laugh, and she said if I was going to be stingy with my stummick she would slide on a slay. Yoomlas wanted us to go home with her to make some fudge but when we got in we thought we couldn't make it because the minister was calling, but he came out in the kitchen and wanted to help, and he got in the way and was always grinning like a catfish, till Feeble got him to touch the candy to see if it was getting cold, and it was redhot and stuck to his finger, and if my grandfather had of been there I bet the minister would of been glad to borrow some of his language.

I went to bed early.

Makes Hair Behave But Doesn't SHOW!

There's a way to keep your hair just-so, without any of that objectionable, "plastered-down" look. Just use a few drops of Danderine—comb it through hair, or use a Danderine-dampened towel—you'll be amazed at the way your hair then behaves, and its beautiful lustre!

Any permanent wave or water wave lasts much longer and looks much nicer when Danderine is used instead of water to "set" the wave.

Of course, you know what Danderine does to dandruff! Dissolves every bit of it. Puts scalp in the pink of condition. Invigorates hair and hair-roots. Why use anything else?

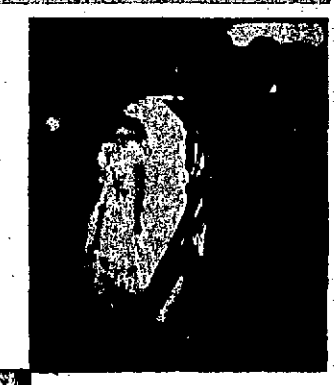
Clarence Badger and Clara Bow,

Paramount director and star, say

"Smooth skin is a girl's greatest charm"



New incandescent "sun-spot" lights—film even more highly sensitized than before! That is why the beloved screen stars must now keep their skin lovelier and smoother than ever for the all-revealing close-up.

CLARA BOW, Paramount's popular star, in the bathroom which is one of the most luxurious built in Hollywood.

"A beautifully smooth skin means even more to a star than to other women. Keeping one's skin flawless for the all-seeing eye of the camera means constant care. Lux Toilet Soap is a great help in keeping the skin in perfect condition."

THELMA TODD, First National star, says: "A star's skin must be what we call 'studio skin,' to be lovely in the close-up. It requires constant protection, especially in hard water. Lux Toilet Soap's gentle lather is lovely for my skin."

The next time you see MERNA KENNEDY, sparkling little star with Universal, notice how delightfully smooth Lux Toilet Soap keeps her skin. "A star must guard with as much care the perfection of her skin! Lux Toilet Soap keeps my skin so smooth," she says.

9 out of 10 Screen Stars guard their skin this way

NO MATTER where you see it—on the street, at dinner, on the screen—your heart beats a little faster in response to a faultlessly lovely skin.

"The most important thing in making a girl lovely is an exquisite smooth skin," says Clarence Badger, Paramount—and sums up the opinion of 39 leading directors in Hollywood.

"Because beautiful skin charms people so, it is a first essential for screen stardom," he continues. "Velvety skin is the treasured possession of every screen star."

As Clara Bow says, "A beautifully smooth skin means even more to a screen star than to other women."

Of the 451 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars, 442 (98%) keep their skin smooth and lovely with Lux Toilet Soap. Little wonder, then, that all the great film studios have made this white fragrant soap the official soap in their dressing rooms.

When you see your favorite star in the theatre, remember that nine out of ten screen stars use Lux Toilet Soap for smooth skin.

LEGION RITES HELD AT LYNCH FUNERAL

Local Post Conducts Services for Physician; Burial at Mt. Victory

Last rites for Dr. E. E. Lynch, World war veteran, who died Saturday afternoon following a long illness, were held today in charge of Bird-McGinnis Post, No. 162 of the American Legion. The full Legion burial ritual was presented at the Methodist church in Mt. Victory, where services were held.

Short services were held at his home, 765 Bellefontaine ave., at 12:30 o'clock. The Legion took no part in the services at the home. The body was then taken to Mt. Victory with members of the American Legion acting as an escort.

Services at the church in Mt. Victory started at 2 o'clock with Dr. B. L. George, pastor of the Epworth M. E. church, in charge assisted by the Rev. H. E. Williamson, pastor of the Oakland Evangelical church. Interment was made in Mt. Victory cemetery.

The firing squad of the LaRue post of the American Legion acted for the local post, as there is no firing squad in this city.

Pallbearers, members of the local Legion post, were Charles Howard, J. W. Llewellyn, William Marks, Paul Knappenberger, T. E. Klunear and George T. Gerau.

SENATE TO RETAIN BILL 'TIME CLAUSE'

Poll Reveals 59 Senators Pledged To Enact Measure with Limitation Note

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—In the face of opposition from President Coolidge and President-elect Hoover, the senate will retain the "time clause" in the administration's new cruiser bill, an incomplete poll of the senate revealed today.

The poll revealed 59 senators pledged to enact the bill with the time limitation included, 16 opposed to the time clause and twenty-one noncommittal or absent. This preponderance of support for the time clause insures its adoption.

The time clause, now the center of controversy in senate debate over the measure, provides for the laying of keels for five of the 15 new cruisers within the present year, for five more in 1930 and the last five in 1931. The giant new aircraft carrier would be started by June 30, 1930.

The action of President-elect Hoover in indorsing President Coolidge's stand against the time clause apparently had little effect in the senate.

STORY OF PASTEUR WILL BE BROADCAST

The almost unbelievable contribution of a bashful French chemist to the health and happiness of the human race will form the second episode of the national health broadcast over a national network at 7:15 o'clock Friday night.

One summer day in 1885, so the story goes, a mad dog got loose in a Russian village. Before the rabid animal could be killed it had bitten more than a dozen children. Faced with the most horrible of all deaths, the plight of the children aroused national interest.

In Paris, a quiet, retiring scientist read the news. He asked that the children be sent to him. Funds were quickly raised and a special train rushed the children across Germany and into France. Reaching Paris they met Louis Pasteur. Pasteur had immunized dogs but had never tried his rabies treatment on human beings. Desperate situations call for desperate methods. Could he save these Russian children. He tried his process. It worked. None of the children developed the dreaded disease. In one bold stroke Pasteur won the everlasting gratitude of humanity.

Young Men's Club Plans Volleyball Series at Upper Sandusky

UPPER SANDUSKY, Jan. 29—The regular weekly meeting of the Young Men's Club was held last night at the Y. M. C. A. with the President Attorney David Creger in charge. It was decided to have special topics selected for the next meeting so that these can be discussed as part of the program.

Four volleyball teams were organized to play a series of games during the month of February. These teams are: Riverside club, Clerks, Automotive and Teachers. A committee reported on the prospect of purchasing a Bowling alley for the Y. M. C. A. No definite action was taken on this report.

Villainous thoughts may visit anyone, presumably; but some dwell on them.

BOSTON BILLY SHOT IN ESCAPE ATTEMPT

Jewel Thief Wounded as He Tries To Leap from Train

CLINTON, N. Y., Jan. 29—James F. Monaghan, alias "Boston Billy" Williams, notorious jewel thief, was shot and slightly wounded in an attempt to escape from a New York Central train near here today.

"Boston Billy" was being returned to Dannemora prison from Mineola where he had been taken to testify at the trial of Edgar Kane, an alleged accomplice of his in the robbery of Jesse Livermore's home in Nassau county last summer.

As the train neared Clinton, the convict succeeded in wrenching his wrist free from a pair of handcuffs with which he was held fast to Deputy Sheriff Warren and smashed a nearby window. He was preparing to leap from the speeding train when Sergt. John Smith of the Nassau county police sent one bullet into him.

New Discovery Clears, Soothes Nasal Passages

There's no use allowing a cold to dull your senses, keep you stuffed-up miserable, half-sick and weak, nowadays, when thousands are being amazed by the quick way this new discovery clears up the nasal passages, soothes the irritated, inflamed mucus membranes and relieves colds, coughs, nasal catarrh, and even headaches from any cause.

There's no waiting for results from "Arome," as this marvelous refreshant is called. It acts directly on the affected parts. No waiting for tablets or powders to be absorbed by the system. "Arome" is an aromatic liquid, which vaporizes as you breathe it in through nose and mouth.

"Arome," is so easy to use anywhere at any time. All you need do is put a few drops on your handkerchief before you leave home. It is so highly concentrated that it keeps its effectiveness all day. You just keep breathing it in at intervals, as you think of it, until your cough, cold, or headache is completely relieved. Or you can easily carry the handy, 50c vials in purse or pocket.

Doctors say, breathing "Arome" forms an oily film of protection on the delicate mucous lining which makes you practically immune to outside infection from colds. So it is a good plan to carry a little on your handkerchief when going out to large gatherings. All druggists recommend and guarantee it.—Adv.

MAY CALL COOPER IN TRIAL OF BUCKLEY

Use of Dictograph During Visits of State Treasurer Revealed

continue throughout the day John Sperber, brewmaster of the Jackson Brewers Co, at Cincinnati, and Joseph Schrimper, Cincinnati attorney, who were jointly indicted with Buckley and who pleaded guilty when arraigned are expected to follow Eckhart to the stand Adolph "Dolly" Gruber Schrimper's law partner, and alleged co conspirator, who was not indicted by the grand jury because of information said to have been furnished the government, is also expected to assume the stand

Outgrowth of Raid

When Governor Cooper is sworn in as a witness he will tell the court how Buckley wrote letters to him indorsing Eckhart for the job of prohibition commissioner of Ohio, it is forecasted

All of the government witnesses will substantiate Eckhart's testimony, it is said

The indictment of Buckley was an outgrowth of the raiding of the Jackson brewery in Cincinnati and the discovery of beer which contained over an illegal alcoholic percentage Sperber the brewmaster, went to Schrimper and Gruber who in turn, sought the aid of Buckley Buckley, according to Haveth E Man, U S. district attorney, received a donation of $250 to his campaign fund for state treasurer as his part in the deal

Eckhart resumed his testimony as the court reconvened this morning The federal officer is 39 years of age His hair is steel gray and he wears glasses

Introduces Postal Card

A postal card from Buckley to Eckhart at the time the state treasurer was vacationing in New Orleans was introduced as evidence The message on the card was brief It read Going good Telegrams sent by Buckley to Eckhart also were submitted by the prosecution

The government it is indicated is trying to substantiate the conspiracy charges by showing Buckley kept Eckhart in touch with the situation Eckhart was to have informed Buckley when raids on certain Cincinnati breweries were to be made, and the treasurer in turn was to have notified the Cincinnati interests, the state charges

It was shown that the vacation referred to was immediately after the August primaries, in which Buckley was renominated by the Republican party as it candidate for state treasurer

Dictograph Installed

A dictograph was installed in the Eckhart home at a time when Buckley was to visit him, the witness testified Two witnesses were on the receiving end of the instrument and heard the alleged incriminating evidence to the effect that Buckley offered Eckhart the prohibition commissionership of Ohio The alleged conversation took place Dec 3, it was testified

The microphone of the dictograph was cleverly concealed in a radio loud speaker Eckhart said Mention of money also was made the witness declared

Eckhart stated that Buckley offered him $300 a month for the information on pending raids When asked by the witness where the money was to come from, the defendant is alleged to have declared that 'protection money' was paid on each keg of beer that went out of Cincinnati breweries

A dictograph was used again when Buckley made a visit to Eckhart's office, it was testified It was then that Buckley told the federal officer of an attempt to see Cooper so as to arrange the appointment of Eckhart as prohibition commissioner of Ohio Eckhart related that it was said his chances for the appointment were "slim" and that Buckley then offered me the job of second place,' meaning the assistant prohibition commissionership

Eckhart told of lavish parties given by Schrimper when he visited Columbus The witness also said that Schrimper always had plenty of money and liquor

Another time Dec 19 a dictograph was in the room where Buckley and Eckhart were conversing It was testified that Eckhart told Buckley of an impending raid and that money matters were discussed again Eckhart related that Buckley told him his campaign for the nomination as state treasurer cost him $4 800

MARION TO PROTEST GAS TAX PROPOSAL

City Solicitor Instructed To Open Fight Against Change in Law

Marion fired its gun last night in the campaign to keep the state legislature from repealing the present gasoline tax law and passing a new measure which would keep the municipalities from sharing receipts from the tax

City council last night passed a resolution authorizing City Solicitor George I Geran to draft a letter protesting the proposed change and to send copies to Governor Cooper, State Senator Robert Rohe and Representative H W Cockston

Contained in the resolution was a paragraph stating that if the solicitor deemed it necessary council would appoint a committee to wait on the governor to protest the bill

Under the new measure the amount of money now received by municipalities from the gasoline tax would be divided between the counties and the state This would mean the elimination of approximately $70,000 now received by Marion for use in street repairs.

It was pointed out by Service Director O V Benedict that if this money is taken away from the city it would mean the elimination of street repair work unless some other means was found to raise the necessary funds

DANDRUFF
Soon Destroys the Hair
If you want plenty of thick, beautiful glossy, silky hair, by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.
It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon, apply it at night when retiring use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips
By morning most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.
You will find, too that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better You can get liquid arvon at any drug store Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have This simple remedy never fails —Adv.

BETTING on the favorites is good policy nine times out of 10, but it must have been the tenth time in the Industrial league last night when the dope bucket—a thing on which sports writers lay the blame when things go wrong—was knocked for a row of cocked hats.

For the first time this season the Osgood cagers tasted from the cup of defeat, going down before the superior attack of the C., D. & M.-Kappa outfit to the tune of 18-15. Osgood is still on top of the league standings but its position is not so secure, one game separating the leaders from the second-place Electric fire.

With 11 points to his credit, Appiegett was the main factor in Osgood's defeat. The Electric guard could not miss making all his points from long range. Penry and Tschanen each scored four points for the losers.

Osgood led 8 to 6 at the first quarter but dropped behind in the second period when the Electrics held a 12 to 9 lead. The winners were held scoreless in the third period, while Osgood increased its score to 13 points.

The Steam Shovel cagers dropped into third place when the College-Malleable five chalked up an 18 to 14 victory. The Shovels trailed throughout the game and never seriously threatened the victors.

Pendon, the College center, was the stellar performer of the encounter, getting six points from two buckets and a like number of free throws. Ward counted four points to lead the Shovels.

Flashing some fast team work, the Power-Hocking last night had sufficient punch to pull over to the win column at the expense of the Bohannan-Excavators. The final score was 21 to 20.

The contest was close throughout with the Power quintet holding the lead at each quarter mark. Wainfor was good for 11 points while Jolliff counted seven for the losers.

Hans Wagner, One Time Star in Major Leagues, Now Holds Job At $7 Per Day

Never Made More Than $10,000; Born 20 Years Too Soon

Photo shows Hans Wagner, picturesque and lovable contemporary of Big Six, and the Babe Ruth of 20 years ago, taking the oath as sergeant-at-arms of the Pennsylvania state legislature at Harrisburg before Miss Olive Barnett, secretary of the lower house. Hans, or Honus, as the fans knew him, was one of the most popular players the game ever had.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—"Hans Wagner, one time star of the major leagues, has been appointed an assistant sergeant-at-arms for the house of representatives at Harrisburg. The post pays $7 a day."—News item.

There is a sob in every line of that paragraph for the lad who likes to weep his way to fame and fortune. Hans Wagner reduced to the role of a $7-a-day pensioner; Hans Wagner, hailed by John McGraw and other critics as greater than Cobb and Ruth, as the greatest of all, in fact. Hans made big money when money was small and he was no benevolent spender, either. He saved his money against a rainy day but maybe he wanted enough for a Johnstown flood. Anyhow, it didn't stay with him. Today, he is making small money when money is big.

Innate Honesty

However, the date of his birth and his innate honesty have more to do with Wagner's status at the moment than the fact that investments aren't sound. Like many an old timer, Wagner was born too soon. He probably never made more than $10,000 a season out of baseball and then only for a comparative few years. His life time salary average was about $5,000, so that he couldn't hope to amass anything that looked like more than a comfortable stake when the era of expensive and expansive living set in. By that time, Wagner long since was finished with baseball and with money.

So much for the vagary that concerns itself with a man's birth. If he was playing major league baseball today, Hans Wagner probably would be drawing an annual salary of $50,000, reckoning his comparative importance against the $40,000 of Hornsby and the $70,000 of Ruth. That doesn't mean that his ability may be measured at $20,000 less than that of Ruth. Fate and showmanship have had much to do with the latter's income.

Wagner was a showman, too, but his color was more physical than instinctive. He didn't have Ruth's flair for the bizarre. Neither did he have the average ball player's irresponsibility in the matter of personal obligation. And there you have the second and most convincing reason why Wagner is occupying a minor political job and getting $7 a day—whenever the Pennsylvania legislature is in session. He could have doubled or trebled the money he made in baseball if his word of honor hadn't been one of the sacred things of his life.

Troublous Times

It all happened in the troublous times around 1901 and 1902 when the American league was a raiding outlaw, fighting for recognition. It enticed many of the stars away from the National, including the best of Wagner's team mates. But it never got Hans. He had given his word to Barney Dreyfuss that he wouldn't jump and no offer could move him. They tell all kinds of fantastic stories of how American league officials connived to get at Wagner, the best of these having to do with Ban Johnson's alleged approach to the guarded room of the star via a freight elevator.

If he had fallen for the stuff, it is inevitable that Wagner would have been placed in New York and, for all one knows the entire history of the Yankee club would have been altered. He would have made when a pennant winner in 1911 when Cheebro wild-pitched the Big away; he might have kept the club up there so long that its great financial success might have been achieved years earlier. In this case, Rupert and Huston might have been unknown to baseball, for it is hardly likely that they would have been interested in the venture at a bigger price than they paid.

But Wagner, valuing a personal promise above all else, did nothing. And now he has nothing. That's life, I suppose.

50 PARTRIDGES ARE RECEIVED IN COUNTY

Hungarian Birds To Be Distributed Soon by O. H. Neimeyer, Deputy Game Protector; Asks Cooperation of Hunters in Making Check on Fowls

FIFTY Hungarian partridges to be liberated in Marion county have been received by O. H. Neimeyer, Marion county game protector, from the state division of fish and game. The birds were shipped to Ohio from England.

According to Mr Neimeyer, the Hungarian is not only the finest game bird that has ever been brought to this country but it is also one of the best birds for the farmer. In size they come between the quail and ringneck pheasant and resemble the hen pheasant in color.

It is very hard to tell the two sexes of the Hungarian apart, Mr. Neimeyer stated. The male is generally a little larger and the markings on his back are much richer in color with a ring of copper tint around the eye. The male head has more of a taper toward the beak than the female. A wide chestnut horseshoe shaped catch on the male breast is not useful for distinguishing purposes as the mark often appears on very old hens.

Mr. Neimeyer is certain that the farmer will welcome the Hungarian for its habits are about the same as those of the quail. He stated that since the ringneck pheasant are becoming so numerous, farmers are urging that they be destroyed.

The first and last attempt to propagate the bird in Ohio was made in 1912 when Mr. Neimeyer liberated 240 of the birds in Marion and Delaware counties. These disappeared within a few years and none were to be found in the state. Today the birds are quite numerous in certain sections of the state and quite a few may be found in Marion county.

In an effort to find out whether the birds are staying in Marion county, Neimeyer will place bands on their legs. He requests that hunters killing the partridges report the results to him at Prospect. The open season on partridges is from Nov. 15 to Nov. 25. The limit is six in one day.

Harry Hnizder, Ohio Wesleyan forward, is in third place with 46 points. The conference-leading Bishops, however, have played only four games, making Hnizder's average slightly better than that of Popp, the leader. Hnizder has made 17 field goals and 12 free throws.

Two other Bishops, Oram Magly, forward, and Floyd Siegenthaler, center, are tied for fourth place with 33 points each. TO SETTLE TIE

Kerr and White Will Play for Title

Volleyball teams captained by Kenneth Kerr and Robert White, which finished the first half of the Business Men's volleyball league in a tie for first place will play off the tie at 5:30 o'clock tonight on the upper gym floor at the Y. M. C. A.

Both teams lost one game during the first half and were the class of the league. Tonight's battle should be worth seeing.

The first set of games in the second round of the league will be played Wednesday on both gym floors at the Y.

On the upper floor at 5:25 Kelte and Brown meet while at the same time on the lower floor Barnhart and Kerr will open their season. At 5:50 on the upper floor Tobin meets Pfeiffer and on the lower floor at the same time Locke meets Clark.

CHAMBERS MAY GET GEORGIA TECH POST

Ohio State Trainer To Confer with Southern Officials

COLUMBUS, Jan. 29—Mike Chambers, Ohio State university's famous athletic trainer, is on his way today to Atlanta, Georgia, where he will hold a conference with Georgia Tech officials and Bill Alexander, head football coach of the Golden Tornado.

Chambers received a request from Alexander a few days ago for a conference, and it is believed that the Buckeye trainer, whose contract expires in June, may be offered the training job for Georgia Tech teams.

Alexander and Chambers became acquainted on the Olympic trip to Amsterdam last summer, when Mike was on the training staff of the United States team.

WINS EIGHTH

WILMINGTON, Jan. 29—Wilmington college Quakers won their eight victory in 10 starts here last night at the expense of Detroit City college, 27 to 17. With Detroit leading in the last half, Chuck Weimer entered the game and scored nine points to place his team ahead.

STARTS TOUR

YELLOW SPRINGS, Jan. 29—Delaware college, in its first game on its basketball tour of Ohio, North Carolina, and West Virginia downed Antioch here last night, 33 to 30. Delaware led at the half 12 to 11, and was in the lead all through the game, although the margin was never more than three points.

FIGHT FOR SECOND PLACE TO FEATURE CHURCH LOOP FRAYS

First Round of League Play Ends Tonight at "Y"

WITH the Central Christian five firmly entrenched in first place in the Senior Sunday School league the last series of games of the first round scheduled for tonight at the Y. M. C. A. will feature battles for second and third places. At the present time Trinity Baptist, Epworth, and Waldo are in a tie for second place with two games won and two lost.

Central Christian and United Brethren open the evening's festivities starting at 8 o'clock. This game, scheduled as the second, was tipped up one notch. Christian should have little trouble in keeping its slate clean in this game. The U. B's started out the season with a grand rush but faded out like the proverbial evening breeze in the heat of the race.

Epworth and Calvary meet in the second game which should be nothing short of a romp for the fast-stepping Methodists. Cram and Partridge both become eligible with this game after a week's layoff in last Tuesday's battle with Waldo. The M. E.'s, providing they win this game, will finish this season with three games won and two lost.

Trinity Baptist and Waldo tussle in the last game that should be the best of the evening's offerings. Both teams are tied for second place and the game tonight will relegate one of them out of the select finishers. Waldo should emerge the winners providing Bob Merchant is still among the missing on the Baptist lineup. The Baptists were lost without him in last week's game with the Christians and can hardly be conceded a chance against the south county team in the case of his disappearance tonight.

In case Epworth, Waldo, and Christians win tonight the league will finish in the following order, Christians, Epworth and Waldo tied, Baptists, Calvary and United Brethren tied.

In the intermediate league Christians meet Epworth in the game that will decide the championship for the first half. At the present the Christians are leading the loop with four won and none lost while Greenwood is trailing by one game with three won and one dropped. The Epworth team should not cause the leaders a great deal of trouble but you never can tell.

Greenwood meets the weak Baptist team and should come home the winners by at least 15 points and Calvary should not even bother the Presbyterian five in the opening game of the night at 7 o'clock.

RISKO IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—Johnny Risko of Cleveland was here today to finish training for his bout with Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, at Madison Square Garden on Friday night. The winner will get the bout with K. O. Christner on Feb. 22 if Paulino or Tom Heeney does not accept terms for the Christner bout, according to Matchmaker Tom Ardle.

Wall Street Stocks Stand Up Under Selling Pressure

BOARD VOTES DOWN U. S. STEEL REFUND

Expected Bullish Report of Corporation Aids Stock Sale

Bears Train Guns on Rail and Specialty Shares

BY W. S. COUSINS
N. Y. Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Jan 29—Though [illegible] to carry a heavy load of selling orders from the opening gong today, the stock market gave a good [illegible] itself. Industrial stocks [illegible] a point or two under [illegible] and the continuous pot [illegible] the bearish sharp shooters [illegible] were directed with some force [illegible] the speculative leaders in all [illegible] stocks and a few of the [illegible] specialties.

Wall Street quiet early concluded that all of the talk about extra [illegible] leads by the Steel corporation directors today belonged in the class [illegible] No doubt the wish [illegible] father to the thought, but the [illegible] corporation heads are plan[illegible] the game too conservatively to [illegible] to stockholders a $20,000,000 [illegible] refund before it has time to [illegible] comfortably in the corporation bank account. It was believed, however, that the directors after the [illegible] today will issue a bullish report on the third quarter 1928 earnings and for that reason "big steel" was bought around 184½, down fractionally from Monday's close.

Steady pressure on the industrial stocks forced prices gradually downward as the day advanced, and the [illegible] consolation for the bulls was in the fact that trading slowed up as prices went down, showing that there was no great volume of stock coming into the market. From one to three points were marked off the selling prices of General Motors, American Tel. and Tel., Canadian Pacific, Union Carbide, Woolworth, Kennecott Copper, General Electric, Johns Manville, National Cash Register, Hudson, Steel Common and Greene Cannon in the early after-noon.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S GRAIN

CHICAGO, Jan. 29—Grains broke sharply in the final hour of trading yesterday. A late wave of selling, based partly on a bearish interpretation of Secretary of Agriculture Jardine's forecast of the farm situation for 1929, found support lacking and prices dropped sharply.

Wheat was lower early on profit taking sales, but reports of crop damage possibilities and strength at Winnipeg brought a rally at mid-session. Signs of weakness in the corn market increased, offerings and the market was already weak when the late selling began. Closing prices were 1 5-8@1 3-4c lower, with the March at $1.23 3 8; May $1.26 7-8, and July, $1.28 1-2.

Corn Firm Early

The corn market was firm early despite the weakness in wheat, but report of the purchase of 100,000 bu of cash corn to come here from Kansas City led to selling. Secretary Jardine's statement was held particularly bearish on corn and prices broke about 1c in the final fifteen minutes of trading, to close 1 1-4@1 1-2c off, with March at 97 1-4c; May, $1.00 1 4, and July, $1.02 1-8.

Oats finished 1-2@7-8c down and rye prices registered net losses for the day of 7-8@1 1-8c.

That part of Secretary Jardine's forecast in which he expressed the belief that the United States would meet increased competition from foreign countries in the world corn market was construed as bearish. It led to a sharp increase in the liquidation which was already under way in the markets.

Reports Conflicting

While sentiment toward the wheat market was still bullish in the early trade principally because of the severe cold weather over the belt, there was a disposition to be cautious on the advances and indications of weakness caused nervousness on the part of longs. An erratic price movement was the result.

Reports from the winter wheat territories were rather conflicting, but there was enough indications of unsatisfactory conditions to lead to scattered commission house buying. There was some early selling attributed to Liverpool.

Aside from the weather there was little of interest in the news, and this was considered the reason for lack of broadbuying power which has been present recently. Liverpool was about as due, finishing ¾@⅞d lower. An rupture at Winnipeg was responsible for the mid-session bulge here, but that market responded to our decline and sold off to close 1⅜@1½c lower.

Trade in corn was quiet and largely a local affair in the early part of the session. As in wheat there was a lack of any incentive toward active buying, and while short covering after Saturday's decline and purchases against sales of wheat held the market firm early sellers and timid longs were quick to act upon the report of purchase of 100,000 bu from Kansas City and the bearish construction of Secretary Jardine's report.

Nothing in the way of export business in any of the grains was reported. Commercial demand for cash corn was characterized as excellent. Country offerings showed a rather sharp increase, which added to the selling. Bookings totaled 140,000 bu.

Changes in the United States visible supply were: Wheat decreased 1,748,000 bu; corn increased 2,362,000 bu; oats increased 105,000 bu; rye increased 28,000 bu; and barley decreased 218,000 bu.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Following a day when many price changes were noted in Marion's trading places, comparative quiet existed today at retail stores where groceries, fruits, meats and vegetables are sold. Not a single change was registered today.

Yesterday two prices were lowered in the provision department, the most pronounced being a drop in the price of sugar. Four or five changes were made in the meat departments, these being an even split, half advancing and half being lowered.

NEW AUTO FEE PLAN

Anti-Alien Bill Offered by State Senator from Urbana

COLUMBUS, Jan 29—Bible reading in the public schools daily, elimination of speed limits for motor vehicles, and prevention of the employment of aliens on public works in Ohio are provided for in bills which today awaited reference to house standing committees

Other house bills occupying a similar status on the legislative calendar include an emergency measure, by Rep David S Ingalls Cleveland, authorizing municipalities to issue two year certificates of indebtedness for operating expenses this year if 75 per cent of the general revenue is required to meet current sinking fund and interest obligations

By Rep G F Sharp Vinton county placing a tax of five per cent on the gross receipts of all amusements by Rep W L Guard Urbana levying a production tax of one per cent on the gross earnings of all Ohio mines by Rep O S Creighton Marietta prohibiting the operation of a motor vehicle whose exhaust is not muffled

Graduated Scale

Rep Lloyd Weaver Summit county introduced a bill restoring the graduated scale of fees for auto licenses, this which was abolished four years ago when the state gasoline tax was passed The proposed law would require payment of the full fee between Jan 1 and April 1, and would authorize a reduction of 25 per cent on tags between April 1 and July 1 and a reduction of 75 per cent on tags bought betwe n Oct 1 and Jan 1

The Bible bill, introduced by Rep resentative Weaver, is similar to the measure which passed the legislature four years ago and which was vetoed by former Gov Vic Donahey It provides that the state director of education shall prepare a manual of 10 verses for each day of the school year to be read by the teachers without comment School boards would be forced to discharge teachers who failed to do so

Weaver, a farmer explained that he offered the bill at the request of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics which is said to have 6,700 members in Summit county The bill four years ago was supported by the Ku Klux Klan

Would Eliminate Limits

Rep Elmer E Boden, Summit county introduced the bill to eliminate speed limits on motor vehicles The measure is similar to the present Michigan law The driver would be permitted to drive at a "reasonable" rate of speed considering traffic conditions surface and width of the highway

Sen W A Clark Urbana, offered the anti-alien bill It would require the state and all political subdivisions to employ only citizens, or aliens who have filed their declaration of intention to become citizens All contractors on public works would be prohibited from employing any person except citizens The bill is similar to one introduced by Senator Clark two years ago which passed the senate but failed to pass the house

The Ohio State Automobile association is said to be supporting the Boden bill eliminating speed limits

257 Bills Already

With the legislature entering upon its fourth week a total of 257 bills already have been introduced including 97 in the senate and 160 in the house At a brief session last night, 26 new bills were offered in the house and five in the senate Both legislative branches recessed until 1 30 o'clock this afternoon

Senator C L Shafer Van Wert county offered a bill providing more stringent regulations for licensing stationary engineers Rep W H Van Fossan Columbiana county put in a bill authorizing county school superintendents to nominate assistant superintendents and principals Rep R D Smith Columbiana county, introduced a bill making it compulsory for lower courts to file a transcript of evidence when error in prosecution on appeal is en
